

Flagging means wearing coloured handkerchiefs or other objects to indicate and attract sexual interest.

Flagging is pan gender. (you can't assume someone's junk from a flag).

opinicus rampant extends and complements traditional gay male flagging in ways that are compatible for all genders and sexualities, so you can accurately decode any hanky on any body.

Flagging is not consent.

While flagging is about inviting potentially sexual attention, it's not an invitation for sexual harassment: no means no.

Flagging is about initiating play in which the specifics of consent are negotiated in conversation.

Being into the same play doesn't mean you'll be into each other.

Flagging means being cool with being propositioned, being rejected, and having the capacity to reject.

Swiftly and graciously accepting rejection is a cornerstone of radical consent. It hurts, but if you really believe in sexual autonomy, you just have to suck it up - without pleading or wheedling or demanding answers.

You need a reason to be with someone, not to reject them.

Know your own boundaries and hard limits and how you plan of negotiating them in advance.

Be prepared to take safer sex precautions.
